

14 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD NEVER FALL IN LOVE WITH A POET

Sharifa & Latifa

1. They will touch every inch of you just to find a crack to lose themselves into; every broken part of your body becomes a part they choose to rest themselves in and call it "home".
2. You will notice the poet creating thunderstorms, even on their good days. They drain the sun of radiance on it's brightest days but all you could do is stand by and watch. You see, disasters are a poet's best-friend so if you fall in love with a poet you are bound to find yourself cleaning the mess.
3. They're nothing but classy sinners self rains on the remains of godly empires and misfortunes of lonely lovers
4. They tend to forget to answer their phone, their email and their messages. Time just slips from their finger tips when there are constant reminders of what they could've been.
5. Never underestimate the power of a poets pen or the name they hide behind. When they start seeing the world in red it's not easy to make it grey and white again. They will tear the edges of paintings just to feel the paint run free on their aching hands.
6. You will notice every kiss tastes differently. Sometimes it fills your mouth with tragedies and other times it leaves you with a bittersweet aftertaste, mostly bitter though. A poets kiss is almost as good as death. It fills you with overwhelming passion and never ending blood lust for underlying meanings in mundane words and actions. It leaves you reading falling leaves like holy books and worshipping broken hearts in empty pews of an empty church.
7. They'll get away with words beautifully exaggerated stories from a semi tortured life and you'll believe every sonnet, every poem and every lie— every "I'm sorry, I didn't mean to"
8. Expect tongue-slips of "I love you 's" followed by jaw clenched apologies; "sorry I got caught up in the moment" after the second date but you will believe them. You never doubt a flower that blooms under the sunlight until you realize you never planted a seed in the first place.
9. Poets have the tendency to think they are in a movie— dead poets society to be precise. So be ready to do things just for the sake of it and always prepare for the worst. Especially when it comes to cutting you out, crying, screaming, mumbling none sense. All of it— never less, never more.

10. Everytime a poet reaches for your hands, you will notice their tense shoulders because of the way they try to hold the weight of the world on them. Your hands will feel like a sanctuary to them and all their battles will rest when you're around.

11. They can come up with excuses from thin air just to stay in bed drowning in self pity

12. Behind the poet's eyes you will find poems about safe-kept secrets and graveyards of a lover gone wrong. A random kiss in an elevator doesn't qualify as love but in a poet's interpretation, it is enough to write poetry about universes splitting open just because the elevator doors did and 7 seconds in heaven are over.

13. They will ask you to pick up the laundry, wash the dishes and make food cause they're "too busy for mundane chores"

14. If and when you find a way out, you will never really stay out. A poet will keep you in within every line they write. They will bleed the shades of you into paper and that way they build margins around you.
